

SHORT CV ANDREA LENZI 2020

Andrea Lenzi (Bologna, 1953) lives in Rome (Italy), where he is Full Professor of Endocrinology at Sapienza University of Rome and responsible for the Endocrinology, metabolism, obesity and Andrology branch at the Policlinico Umberto I University Hospital.

His past roles at the same University include President of the Degree Course in Medicine, he is currently Director of the Department of Experimental Medicine, Director of the PhD course in Endocrinological Sciences, of the Residency in Endocrinology and Metabolic Diseases.

From a scientific point of view Professor Lenzi is acclaimed nationally and internationally as an expert in Endocrinology. He was Secretary General of the International Society of Immunology of Reproduction, a former Secretary General of the European Academy of Andrology, President of the Italian Society of Andrology and Sexual Medicine (SIAMS) and Italian Society of Endocrinology (SIE). He is currently President of the Italian Research Foundation of the Society of Endocrinology

He is also President of the Italian Board of Professors in Endocrinology, Metabolism and Andrology, President of the Italian Board of Professors in Life Sciences (InterCollegium), past President of the National Committee of Guarantors for Research of the Ministry of Education (2017-19), University and Research and, finally, past President of the Italian National University Council (2007-17), the highest-level university body in Italy.

He is President of the Italian Committee for Biosafety, Biotechnology and Life Sciences operating under the Presidency of the Council of Ministers.

As Researcher in Endocrinology he has produced more than 800 publications, comprising full papers, books, monographs and chapters, including more than 400 original articles published in international journals (Hirsch Index 71 - Ci. 21744 - <http://www.topitalianscientists.org>).

He is currently Editor-in-Chief of the Major Reference Work in Endocrinology (Springer series).